Britain Decides To Pay On Debts To U.S., Canada

Full Installments Expected At Year's End; Churchill Seen Disappointed In Truman Talks

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Britain has decided to pay in full installments of capital and interest due on the United States and Canadian loans at the end of the year.

An informed government source reported that England could have avoided paying the interests on both loans by invoking waiver clauses which were written into the 1946 agreements. In view of its economic plight, there had been speculation that it would do so.

Britain is due to pay the United States $51.5 million in capital and $87 million in interest on Dec. 31.

It is supposed to pay the Ottawa government $14 million in Canadian dollars in capital and $23.7 million in interest on the same day.

Britain owes the United States a total of $4.35 billion $3.75 billion in new money made available under the September 1946 loan pact and $600 million in lend-lease pipeline aid.

Her debt to Canada totals $1.18 billion in Canadian dollars.

POLITICAL factors clearly influenced Prime Minister Winston Churchill's newly elected Conservative government in reaching the decision to pay the whole amount due to the American government.

Churchill and his colleagues felt a decision to waive the interest payment would damage the nation's prestige in the United States and would weaken their overall bargaining power when they meet President Truman in Washington next month for a review of Anglo-American relations.

In Washington, President Truman has ordered detailed preparations made for the talks despite Churchill's reluctance to propose a list of problems for discussion.

U. S. officials say the U. S. side of the two-power meeting is being worked up on the assumption that Churchill will want to go into the whole range of policies governing relations between the two big Western powers and Russia as well as specific Anglo-American issues. Both the State and Defense Departments are at work on the detailed listings.

Churchill sent word about two weeks ago that he did not plan to

Fairless Believes Curb On Spending To Halt Inflation

WOOSTER, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel Corp. and a College of Wooster trustee, Tuesday night proposed the government stop inflation at the source by "curbing unnecessary spending."

Intimating the government is insincere in its wage-price stabilizing program, Fairless said:

"For reasons that are undisclosed but easily surmised, their government officials zeal in stabilizing wages is something less than convincing."

"Yet, they must know," he said, "that if wage boosts go up, prices must go up also."

He called the possibility of an atomic war and the growing power of the government two "gray edgers within our country."

Court To Decide Religious Issues

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The U. S. Supreme Court will decide next year two controversial issues involving schools and religion.

The nine justices have agreed to rule whether public schools violate the Constitution by releasing students for religious instruction during regular school hours.

Previously, the court agreed to decide whether daily Bible reading in public schools is permissible under the Constitution.

Several parents insist such acts by public schools tend to break down the separation of church and state required by the Constitution's first amendment.

22,000 Collegians To Take Exams

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—About 22,000 college students are expected to take the college qualification test Thursday to become eligible for a draft deferment if they pass it.

About 339,000 took the test last spring and summer. The testing system was set up by Selective Service to give its local draft boards evidence of a student's ability to continue college study.

4-YEAR-OLD Mary Cawley is way too young to die, but doctors in Brooklyn, N. Y., told her parents it was doubtful whether she could survive the dread blood disease, leukemia, till Christmas, so her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Cawley, will have a special pre-Christmas party.

Weather Holding Key To Ohio Fuel Gas Winter Total

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Ray Martin, state utilities commissioner, says that there should be a sufficient amount of gas available to Ohio gas consumers this winter "if we get a break in the weather."

He referred to the gas supply outlook of Ohio Fuel Gas Co. which serves industries and homes in 66 Ohio counties. It is a major customer of Columbia Gas System, Inc.

But, Martin said, there's still no cause for over-optimism.

"A lot depends on how Columbia's supply of propane (liquefied gas used in emergencies) holds out," he said. "Another big 'if' is the amount of stored gas the company will have to use at one time. But the situation is encouraging over the picture of last May, when the freeze went into effect."

Last May the Ohio utilities commission stopped customers of Columbia in Ohio from installing new heating units.

"Columbia has been taking all the extra gas it could get and storing it," Martin said. "The system is set up so that gas in one state can be shifted to another state where the demand might be higher temporarily."

He said there still is a chance, though not so great, that gas to residential customers will be curtailed on very cold days.

Suicide Attempts By Dog Reported

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is convinced it has a dog on its hands that is trying to commit suicide.

George J. Reilly, manager of the society, said the small, brown mongrel dog jumped in the Woonasquatucket River twice in the last two days, both times fighting off rescuers until captured.

Now, Reilly says, the dog is apparently trying to starve himself, rejecting both food and warm milk.

4 California Tax Officials Indicted

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—(AP)—James G. Smyth, ousted Northern California federal tax collector, and three others are accused of tampering with income tax returns to defraud the government, as the climax to a seven-month federal grand jury probe.

This didn't mean the Northern California internal revenue shake-up was over. In Washington, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said he is naming a special assistant to handle income tax cases here.

UN, Reds Shun Other's Offer

Prisoner Exchange, Observer Plans Given Cold Shoulders

MUNSAN, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A new Red plan for exchanging prisoners of war and an Allied compromise for supervising a Korean truce with neutral observers has fallen on cold shoulders.

The United Nations Command expressed fears publicly for the first time that the Communists might not give up all the prisoners they hold.

The fear was expressed in turning down a five-point prisoner exchange plan advanced Wednesday by Communist negotiators at Panmunjom. The Red proposal still called for release of all prisoners. The UN insists on a man-for-man exchange.

"The UN Command is concerned," an official communiqué said, "that premature agreement on bulk exchange of prisoners before adequate data is available could result in sizable numbers not being recovered."

ALLIED negotiators, the communiqué added, "excoriated the Communists" for not letting the Red Cross see how prisoners are being treated and for refusing to say how many prisoners they hold and where.

The Reds have said they would supply the information only after the Allies agree on a blanket exchange. They kept this stand in their five-point plan.

The number of Allied troops in Red hands has been estimated at from 98,000 to 139,000. The UN says it holds between 120,000 and 135,000 Chinese and North Korean Reds.

The only new factors introduced in the Red plan would be to exchange prisoners in groups—the sick and wounded first—under joint Allied-Red supervision.

The Reds said it would take them a month to deliver all prisoners.

A UN spokesman said the Allies made "major compromises and concessions" in its new effort to break the 16-day deadlock over how to supervise the truce.

The Reds said the concessions "were insufficient," but agreed to study the offer.

Egypt Considers Recall Of Envoy To Great Britain

CAIRO, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Acting foreign minister Ibrahim Farag Pasha has announced Egypt is considering the recall of her ambassador from London.

Cairo newspapers reported earlier the cabinet had decided to bring home Ambassador Abdel Fattah Amr Pasha "as a protest against British aggression in the Suez Canal Zone."

The same reports said the cabinet Tuesday night also had decided to "severely punish" Egyptians collaborating with the British and to permit all citizens to possess arms.

Egypt has been threatening to break off diplomatic relations with Britain since the British Army destroyed a village outside Suez City Saturday to make way for a military road. Recall of the ambassador would be a step short of a complete cut in diplomatic ties.

Cost Of War- 102,576 Casualties

Hays Quits BIS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Col. H. L. Hays, superintendent of Boys Industrial School near Lancaster has been granted a military leave of absence to become chief of staff of the Ohio National Guard's 37th Division which goes into federal service Jan. 15.

BOBBING ABOUT in the waters of Washington's Pentagon lagoon, Army research specialists successfully test the new "vapor barrier" combat uniform. It is made of pliable plastic material, completely impervious to water and provides excellent insulation against cold in temperatures from 14 to 60 degrees. It is specially designed for Korean weather. The testing crew pictured above carry 26 pound packs.

Vishinsky's Disappoints The West

Kremlin Aide Says Rival Camps Can Agree On Armaments

PARIS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Russia's Andrei Vishinsky said Wednesday agreements reached during secret Big Four arms talks held out hopes of still further agreement between East and West.

Western powers, however, said they were "rather disappointed" in the tone of his speech.

Vishinsky told the United Nations Political Committee that since the Big Four had agreed to set up a new disarmament commission "that enhances our hopes" that the rival camps could agree on other issues also.

This was generally interpreted to mean that Russia would take part in the commission's work even if it is set up under Western-sponsored directives which the Soviet Union opposes.

French Delegate Jules Moch said, however, that Vishinsky showed no tendency to budge from positions which the West has declared make impossible agreement on atomic control and disarmament.

These positions, as restated by Vishinsky, call for an immediate and unconditional prohibition of the atomic weapon, and the reduction of armed forces by one-third during one year.

THE THREE Western powers are holding out for a step-by-step reduction of armed forces, under stringent international supervision, which would include prohibition of atomic weapons after a foolproof system of safeguards had been set up.

Britain, France and the United States maintain that acceptance of the Russian demand would leave them defenseless against superior Soviet man-power and conventional arms.

After the committee adjourned until Thursday, the three countries issued a joint statement saying:

"We were rather disappointed in the tone of Mr. Vishinsky's speech. He did, however, recognize the work of the sub-committee (Big Four) as useful and we shall continue our attempts to enlarge the areas of agreement."

"As Moch pointed out, we welcomed the assurance that the Soviet Union is prepared to work in the disarmament commission on the basis of decisions taken by the General Assembly."

Asked about the West's assumption that Russia would work in the commission even if it is set up in a resolution which the Soviet Union opposes, a spokesman said that was the interpretation the three powers placed on his speech.

4,903 Ohio Men To Be Drafted

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—State Selective Service headquarters Wednesday issued a January induction call for 4,903 Ohio men.

$800,000 Bank Shortage Bared

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Two men and a woman have been arrested in connection with shortages exceeding $800,000 at the Thomasville (Ala.) Bank and Trust Co.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover identified those arrested as J. Moody Drinkard, 47, president of the bank; Mrs. Myrtle N. McCrory, 48, cashier; and W. P. Stutts, 45, president of Stutts Lumber Industries, Inc., Thomasville, a bank customer.

border between Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Leaders of both houses in the Republican-dominated legislature predicted passage of the amendment asked by Gov. Frank J. Lausche, a Democrat.

The governor called the special session Monday to enact a change submitted by the Ohio Turnpike Commission so bankers market bonds.

A house judiciary committee spent two days hearing opponents of the proposal and quizzing commission engineers and attorneys.

Tuesday night committee members revised the administration bill after rejecting amendments bankers said would doom the turnpike.

They inserted a Farm Bureau proposal allowing land owners payment for condemned right-of-way property without waiting for courts to decide appeals.

The committee rejected a proposal to give city councils of Maumee, Ellettsburg and other towns to final say on turnpike routes they object to through their municipalities. Members also tinned down a plea to require alternate bidding on asphalt as well as concrete for paving a turnpike. The commission already has picked concrete for turnpike paving.

Butcher Ceilings Promised By OPS By First Of Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Price controllers say every effort will be made to establish butcher shop dollars-and-cents ceiling prices on lamb and veal by the new year.

Shortly after Jan. 1, the Office of Price Stabilization also expects to put out a regulation setting specific retail ceilings on pork and two price orders covering sausage.

Officials said they expect little change from present prices in setting retail ceilings on veal, lamb and pork.

Along with issuance of orders covering these major meat products, officials declared OPS intentions are to require meat markets to post their prices in full view of their customers.

Britain Decides To Pay On Debts To U.S., Canada

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Britain has decided to pay in full installments of capital and interest due on the United States and Canadian loans at the end of the year.

An informed government source reported that England could have avoided paying the interests on both loans by invoking waiver clauses which were written into the 1946 agreements. In view of its economic plight, there had been speculation that it would do so.

Britain is due to pay the United States $51.5 million in capital and $87 million in interest on Dec. 31.

It is supposed to pay the Ottawa government $14 million in Canadian dollars in capital and $23.7 million in interest on the same day.

Britain owes the United States a total of $4.35 billion $3.75 billion in new money made available under the September 1946 loan pact and $600 million in lend-lease pipeline aid.

Her debt to Canada totals $1.18 billion in Canadian dollars.

POLITICAL factors clearly influenced Prime Minister Winston Churchill's newly elected Conservative government in reaching the decision to pay the whole amount due to the American government.

Churchill and his colleagues felt a decision to waive the interest payment would damage the nation's prestige in the United States and would weaken their overall bargaining power when they meet President Truman in Washington next month for a review of Anglo-American relations.

In Washington, President Truman has ordered detailed preparations made for the talks despite Churchill's reluctance to propose a list of problems for discussion.

U. S. officials say the U. S. side of the two-power meeting is being worked up on the assumption that Churchill will want to go into the whole range of policies governing relations between the two big Western powers and Russia as well as specific Anglo-American issues. Both the State and Defense Departments are at work on the detailed listings.

Churchill sent word about two weeks ago that he did not plan to draw up an agenda for his series of meetings with the President, beginning Jan. 3.

Even though Churchill does not directly tackle financial matters in his talks with Mr. Truman, however, it is believed by American authorities that he will seek to set the stage for substantial American help by stressing the parallel interests of the two countries in world affairs and emphasizing a need for close partnership and sharing of responsibility.

PRESENT indications are that Mr. Truman will bear down heavily on all three of these questions:

1. The President has said repeatedly that he does not look forward to a meeting with Stalin unless the Soviet premier comes to Washington — something everyone here considers a practical impossibility. Undoubtedly Mr. Truman will seek to discourage Churchill's espousal of this project.

2. Recent Churchill statements bearing on the defense buildup in Western Europe are described by administration leaders here as disappointing. Churchill has said that he does not consider the danger of war with Russia as great now as it was at the time of the Berlin crisis three years ago.

3. The difference between the two countries in the Far East revolves around their basic attitudes toward Red China. The British recognize the Communist regime while the U. S. holds to its recognition of the Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa. This has been a sore point for a long time.

The British prime minister may be disappointed in his Washington visit.

Sen. Taft Bitter In Raps Against Truman Policies

BROOKLINE, Mass., Dec. 12.—Sen. Robert A. Taft, (R-Ohio) says "the Korean war always has been a war, begun by President Truman, usurping the power of Congress under the Constitution."

The Ohio senator made the charge Tuesday night in a speech sponsored by the Norfolk and Suffolk Counties Republican clubs.

Lashing out at the Democratic administration, Taft said Truman "has called it a police action to try and escape the condemnation justly due to any President who begins an unnecessary war."

In his first Massachusetts appearance since he announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President he declared: "The moral character of the national administration has grown from petty graft to dangerous corruption, and to a policy of misrepresentation and concealment on the most important issues of the day."

"For reasons that are undisclosed but easily surmised, their government officials zeal in stabilizing wages is something less than convincing."

"Yet, they must know," he said, "that if wage boosts go up, prices must go up also."

He called the possibility of an atomic war and the growing power of the government two "grave dangers within our country."

Bowling Green Audit Is Asked

BOWLING GREEN, Dec. 12.—President Ralph W. McDonald of Bowling Green state university reported he had asked the state auditor to investigate an apparent fund shortage at the university's hospital.

McDonald said the request was made after Business Manager E. J. Kreischer reported an apparent discrepancy between the money received and the money turned over to the university business office.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 — (AP)—Maybe it's because he's rich and doesn't need the job and so feels free to speak as he pleases. Or maybe he's just new to the ways of Washington, or just an unusual man anyway.

But Frank E. McKinney, the Democrats' new political field general, is developing the habit of putting the pronoun "I" ahead of the president when he makes a speech or talks to reporters.

This 46-year-old Irishman, an Indianapolis banker, was chosen last October as new chairman of the Democratic National Committee which has the job of trying to get the Democrats re-elected next year.

He couldn't have had the job without the blessing of President Truman who is still boss of the Democrats, with McKinney now his No. 1 right-hand man in politics.

Anyone in McKinney's job, of course, is going to have his hands full and his job isn't made easier by the scandals which have been coming to light in Mr. Truman's administration.

IT'S GENERALLY acknowledged the Trumanites will have to do some cleaning before election time. McKinney publicly stated his awareness of the problem in a speech late in November.

He said then "any man who betrays the people's trust in public office is a public enemy." He promised "no malefactor in public office shall go unpunished."

And then he added: "I am ready to help—and, what is more important, Harry S. Truman is ready to help."

The fact that in this revelation about the administration's intentions he put the letter "I" ahead of the President may have been due entirely to his particular style in composition.

And too, he tempered it by noting Mr. Truman's attitude was more important.

But Tuesday, with the tax scandals getting more unpleasant by the hour, McKinney went to see the President in the White House.

It's usual when one of Mr. Truman's lieutenants confers with him—if they've agreed on some important decision—for the caller to keep quiet so the President can make the announcement in his own way.

This reluctance of White House callers to discuss what "I said to the President and what he said to me" always allows the President—if no one knows what was talked about—to change his mind privately.

BUT WHEN McKinney came out of the White House he was surrounded by reporters.

It may be he was unaware of the White House custom just mentioned or he was just too steamed up by the developing scandals to keep his lip buttoned.

He promptly told newsmen he had advised Mr. Truman he could not overemphasize the importance of "drastic action in the immediate future—without delay. I'm inclined to think there will be action soon."

Perhaps it was planned that way. McKinney, to go ahead and tell the world the White House was going to lower the boom.

It's possible, too, it didn't happen that way and Mr. Truman doesn't appreciate McKinney's telling reporters he, McKinney, had told the President what to do or even that the President intended doing anything.

If Mr. Truman doesn't start a fast cleanup he'll be embarrassed since his own master-politician already has told the world he told the President a cleanup is necessary.

Conrad Bound To Jury For Drunk Driving

John M. Conrad, 30, of Circleville Route 4, was fined $25 and costs in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root Tuesday for operating an auto with fictitious license plates.

He was also bound over to Pickaway County grand jury on $300 bond on accusation that he operated an auto while under the influence of intoxication.

Conrad was arrested Sunday on Route 23 north of Circleville by Deputy Sheriff John White, after an auto driven by Conrad went out of control and into a ditch. The car hit a pole and overturned.

Another driver, John Underwood, 24, of Columbus also swerved into the same ditch to avoid a head-on collision with the Conrad car. The cars did not strike each other.

Injured in the crash were three persons from the Conrad car. Conrad suffered head injuries, cuts and bruises; Lewis Conrad, 22, suffered head injuries and back lacerations and Helen Reed, 21, suffered a possible fractured pelvis, cuts and bruises and shock. All three were treated in Berger hospital.

Yankee Ingenuity Turns Catskill Mountain Into Atom Bomb-Proof Vault for Valuables

By JEROME DREYER
Central Press Correspondent

NEW YORK—When Rip Van Winkle awoke from his legendary 20-year nap in the rolling Catskills, he was startled by the many changes. But nothing he encountered would have shaken him as much as the change that has taken place in one of his favorite valleys a few miles from where he partook of the hospitality of "the little men."

Where once was all peaceful-looking, the serenity has been altered considerably by the addition of a forbidding fortress cut into the side of a mountain. For here has been established the Iron Mountain Atomic Storage corporation, the east's first especially designed bombproof storage vault for the safeguarding of bank records, insurance policies, museum treasures and the important papers of private corporations.

THE INDIVIDUAL vaults in this huge subterranean bank vary in size from the cubic content of a freight car to that of a small house.

Situated 125 miles above Times Square, New York City, in the shafts of an abandoned iron ore company, the site had been worked as an underground mushroom farm until the owner, Herman Knaust, Sr., became aware in a roundabout way of the great need for a storehouse of this kind.

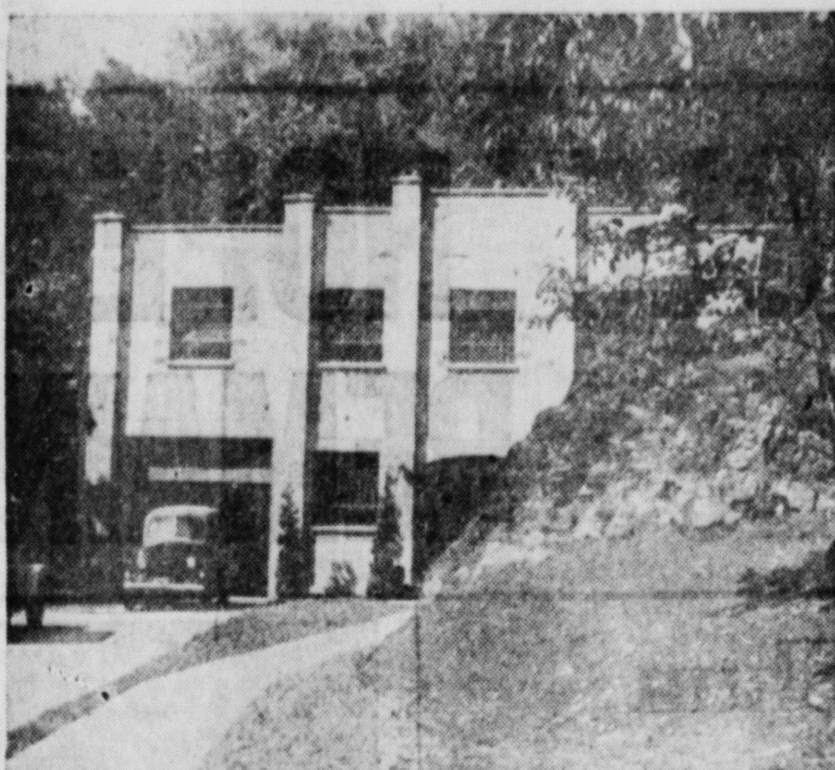

A devout Lutheran, he helped his church in bringing refugees from the Soviet-dominated Baltic countries in 1948, guaranteeing a year's employment to 350 of them as mushroom farmers.

From then he heard how the destruction of business records and art treasures during war could bring misery to individuals as well as the country. This led to consultations with engineers and scientists as to the feasibility of the iron mine-mushroom farm into a huge atom bomb-proof cavern.

When the survey was completed it was established that the iron mountain was still rich in ore and provided a shield of the same resistance to radio-activity as 50 feet of lead. Construction was started in January, 1951, and in a few months 400 of the contemplated 1,000 chambers were finished.

THE PROJECT, the eventual cost of which will be $4 million, consists of several levels from 100 to 500 feet below the surface. Solid rock, camouflaged against hostile airmen, roofs the place.

Within the great cavern airtight, watertight floors, walls and ceilings have been built of concrete, faced with steel, and thick steel doors, one of them weighing 35 tons, are guarded by both time locks and carefully chosen custodians.

According to the American Institute of Iron and Steel, after the atomic bomb explosion at Hiroshima it was discovered that American-built vaults and their heavy steel doors were the only ones to stand up against the blast, which may be the reason why the Atomic Storage corporation is receiving so many requests for space from foreign business firms.

The snug interior of the cavern will be guarded around the clock, will have electric alarms and is completely air conditioned. Electricity is supplied by public power lines, but should an emergency arise there is a complete standby system.

Should the telephone line go out of kilter a radio transmitter is ready to take over. Dampness, a problem where the storage of papers is concerned, has been reckoned by the installation of the latest type of drainage system.

Conner Files Appeal In Drunk Driving Case

Harold Conner, 41, of Circleville, arrested last June on an accusation of drunken driving, has filed a notice of appeal in Pickaway County common pleas court after the court pronounced sentence against him.

As the result of a recent trial in common pleas court on the accusation, Conner this week was fined $100 and costs, sentenced to 30 days in jail and had his driving rights suspended for one year. The jail sentence was suspended in favor of probation.

At the same time, however, Conner filed his notice of appeal, asking that the execution of the sentence be withheld until the district court of appeals rules in the matter.

In view of the notice of appeal, the court stayed the execution of sentence and required Conner to post $300 bond pending the outcome of the appeal hearing.

A PART of the ruling also was that if the district appeals court upholds the decision of the local court that Conner will surrender himself to the sheriff.

Meanwhile, by virtue of the suspension of sentence pending decision by the appeals court, the Circleville man is privileged to retain his driving rights.

Milton Fields Loses Driving Rights For Year

Milton Fields, 38, of Chillicothe, lost his driving privileges for one year Tuesday when he appeared in Pickaway County common pleas court for drunken driving.

The Chillicothe man was fined $10 and costs, sentenced to 30 days in jail and had his driving rights suspended by the court after he entered a plea of guilty to the accusation.

Fields was arrested Monday on Route 104 by State Highway Patrolman S. J. Hobar. He appeared before Judge William D. Radcliff on an affidavit filed by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

The court later suspended the jail sentence in favor of placing Fields on 18-month probation.

5,000 Letters, Real North Pole Dropped By Liner

FAIRBANKS, Dec. 12 — (AP)—A commercial airliner flew over the North Pole for the first time Wednesday to drop mail for Santa Claus and a striped pole to mark the top of the world.

Alaska Airlines reported the bag with 5,000 children's letters to Saint Nick and the pole were pushed out of the four-engine "Polar Express" at 5:58 a. m. (EST). The pole was an Alaskan's idea for marking the north with something besides ice.

The airlines reported all well on the 2,600-mile round trip flight in sub-zero cold from Point Barrow, the northernmost tip of the continent.

The specially fitted four-engine commercial airliner, dubbed the "Polar Express," was the outgrowth of plans sponsored by two Alaskans—neither of whom was allowed to accompany the six crewmen aboard the plane.

The nine-foot steel North Pole, painted like a candy cane, was fathered by Stan Garson, former worker at the Navy's Pt. Barrow oil reserve. The project was expanded by Mrs. Andree Vance, otherwise known as "North Pole Nellie," originator of the idea to have children send along their Christmas requests to Santa Claus for doorstep delivery.

Santa will have to have a mighty efficient staff to handle those letters—he has only 12 days left until he starts his Christmas Eve trip southward. That's more than 400 orders a day to read and fill.

Iran Hands West Ultimatum On Oil

TEHRAN, Dec. 12—(AP)—Strife-ridden Iran has handed the West this ultimatum: Buy our oil or we will sell it to "any would-be buyer." Evidently the Iranian government meant it would sell to Soviet bloc nations.

The "buy or else" ultimatum, giving the West 10 days, or until Dec. 22, to agree, was delivered in the form of letters to 12 embassies and 24 legations in Tehran.

Little Activity On Korean Front

SEOUL, Dec. 12—(AP)—U. S. Sabrejet fighters Wednesday swept over Northwest Korea, but sighted none of the Communist Mig-15 jets that almost daily flock out of Manchuria.

A U. S. Fifth airforce summary said a U. S. Shooting Star jet crashed and burned in Red territory with "no chance of pilot survival." It gave no details.

Doughboys in mist-draped hills across the front held their fire as the twilight war continued.

Typhoons Claim 209 Flip Deaths

MANILA, Dec. 12—(AP)—Two typhoons closed in on the Philippines Wednesday as the death toll from Monday's storm skyrocketed to 209. The Red Cross reported 139 dead on Leyte Island alone.

The weather bureau reported Monday's storm, which blew across the islands from the east, turned on itself in the China Sea and headed back toward the islands.

Crash Victims Reported Good

Frank Fischer, 59, Circleville superintendent of schools, and Wilson Martin, 17, of Circleville Route 3, both were reported "improved" and in good condition Wednesday in St. Francis hospital, Columbus.

The pair was injured last Saturday when their autos collided just north of Shadeville. Fischer is in room 418, while Martin is in room 413.

CONFEDERATE STARS AND BARS WAVE AGAIN

Rebel Flag Display Sweeps South --- No One Knows Why

Flag of Lee, Jackson, etc.

By RAYMOND WILCOVE
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A new craze is sweeping the country and no one knows just what it portends. It is epitomized by the song: "Save your Confederate money, the South will rise again."

Its facade is the Confederate battle-flag which flies from countless automobiles both South and North.

Is it just a fad? Does it portend a southern revolt against the Democratic party? Is it a symbol of general dissatisfaction with things as they are?

Many would like to know, especially the politicians. However, some just don't care. They just hope it continues. They are the people who manufacture the Confederate flags, and the Rebel forage caps, and the jackets bearing the slogan, "The South will rise again."

Recently a flurry was caused when a policeman at the United States Capitol refused to permit the parking of automobiles carrying the Confederate flag. That campaign sort of collapsed when it was discovered that Police Capt. Olin Cavness, in charge of the uniformed men, sported one of the flags on his desk. He hails from Bentonville, Ark.

WHO OR how the craze started is open to dispute, but all are in agreement that it is spreading like wildfire. The United Daughters of the Confederacy reveal that they are receiving many requests for the flag from servicemen in Korea and that these are being filled.

Let the enemy puzzle that one out when they observe the Stars and Bars emblem flying on the battlefields of Korea!

They're even selling Confederate flags in the Frederick, Md., home of Barbara Fritchie, immortalized by poet John Greenleaf Whittier as the heroine who refused to haul down the American flag when Confederates captured the town.

The craze apparently started

Confederate flags greet President Truman in Tullahoma, Tenn.

when college students began flying the Confederate flag from the radiator caps of their automobiles in place of the customary squirrel tails.

Herbert E. Copeland, a Washington flag manufacturer of long experience, comments: "I don't know what it's all about. All I know is that people have gone wild over these flags."

"I've had some college boys tell me they're trying to tantalize President Truman. However, I don't think it's intended to create hard feeling. They seem to be getting a lot of fun out of it."

Confederate flags were prominently displayed during the visit to the nation's capital of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and again when Princess Elizabeth arrived.

In nearby Virginia, members of the Fairfax high school band have been selling Confederate forage caps at $3 each to finance the purchase of uniforms and instruments. More than 250 have already been sold.

THE "REBIRTH" of the Confederate flag may have started some 20 years ago in Mississippi with the inauguration of the Natchez Pilgrimage, in the estimation of some observers.

During the Pilgrimage the residents of Natchez wear hooped skirts and other clothing reminiscent of the era before the War Between the States. Each night during the Pilgrimage a Confedate ball is held at which a king attired in a Confederate uniform presides.

Shortly after the Pilgrimage was launched, the University of Mississippi adopted "Rebels" as the name of its athletic teams and numerous other southern colleges and high schools followed suit. Soon the flying of Confederate flags from grandstands became commonplace at athletic contests in the south.

THE STATES' Rights movement in 1948 capitalized on the sentimental value of the Confederate flag and the song Dixie. Anti-Trumanites used the flag on campaign literature, including automobile windshield stickers.

The fad went north apparently when University of Virginia supporters journeyed to Philadelphia to see their team play the University of Pennsylvania. They were amply equipped with Confederate flags.

Interestingly enough, the craze has apparently not swept Montgomery, Ala., first capital of the Confederacy. Only a few of the flags are to be seen there. Montgomery is now the site of the annual Blue and Gray football game.

Incidentally, this year when the Blue and Gray parade is held prior to the game, there will be an innovation. Along with a float portraying Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, will be a float in honor of Abraham Lincoln!

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 — (AP)— Maybe it's because he's rich and doesn't need the job and so feels free to speak as he pleases. Or maybe he's just new to the ways of Washington, or just an unusual man anyway.

But Frank E. McKinney, the Democrats' new political field general, is developing the habit of putting the pronoun "I" ahead of the president when he makes a speech or talks to reporters.

This 46-year-old Irishman, an Indianapolis banker, was chosen last October as new chairman of the Democratic National Committee which has the job of trying to get the Democrats re-elected next year.

Milton Fields Loses Driving Rights For Year

Milton Fields, 38, of Chillicothe, lost his driving privileges for one year Tuesday when he appeared in Pickaway County common pleas court for drunken driving.

The Chillicothe man was fined $10 and costs, sentenced to 30 days in jail and had his driving rights suspended by the court after he entered a plea of guilty to the accusation.

Fields was arrested Monday on Route 104 by State Highway Patrolman S. J. Hobar. He appeared before Judge William D. Radcliff on an affidavit filed by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

The court later suspended the 18-month sentence in favor of placing Fields on 18-month probation.

President Theodore Roosevelt was the first American to win a Nobel prize. He received the peace award in 1906.

Kiwanians Given Details Of Crime Lab Operations

A detailed account of modern crime detection was given Monday evening in an address made by Sgt. LeRoy Smith of Columbus Police Department, to members of Circle-Kiwanis meeting in New Mecca restaurant.

Sgt. Smith stated that the Columbus crime lab was one of the most modern in the nation for cities of comparable size.

He said, "although we run toxicology and pharmacology tests at the laboratory connected with Ohio State university, most routine tests such as blood and urinalysis tests for drunken drivers, bad accidents and felonies are made in the police lab."

He added, "It is not compulsory for a driver, suspected of being intoxicated, to submit to blood tests, but we made over 50 such tests on drivers last weekend."

"WITH OUR modern equipment we make plaster casts of footprints in burglary cases; we use microscopic tests on hair to determine from what part of the body it came, race and approximate age of the person."

"We can make positive identifications of fabrics as to the type of garment, the dye used, type of weave and often determine the manufacturer."

"In hit and run cases we often

Taft Urges U.S. Use Red Tactics

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—Sen. Robert A. Taft has suggested the United States adopt Soviet tactics and send secret agents into Iron Curtain countries to build up an underground against Communism.

The Ohio senator, who is running for the Republican presidential nomination, said he believed a system could be worked out which would "give the Soviet government something to worry about behind the Iron Curtain itself."

Bricker Booked

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—Sen. John W. Bricker (R-Ohio) is scheduled to speak here Thursday night at the award banquet of the 17th annual convention of the National Junior Vegetable Growers Association.

find particles of paint on the body which, using the spectrograph, helps us determine the color, how the paint was applied and approximate age of the car. And glass fragments left at the scene many times will tell us the type car and model.

"Blood typing tests are run on blood left on murder weapons and laundry marks are helpful in solving a crime. For instance, in one case, we found a laundry mark on a sweat shirt. With the help of the FBI it was found that the type mark was used in a certain institution which aided in apprehension of the criminal."

Sgt. Smith explained how x-ray is used to determine the contents of packages and even loaded dice.

HE ALSO remarked that: "A full set of fingerprints is needed to do a good job, even though many people think a small, incomplete print is enough."

The police officer explained the methods used to restore serial numbers on autos and guns and the use of powder and shot pattern to ascertain where the suspect was standing in relation to the victim.

"One of our most important jobs," he said, "is the use of the lie detector. We run about 75 or 80 such tests each month and will have a full time operator in the near future. Although such evidence is only supportive, there is no doubt, in my mind, that it is conclusive."

The speaker concluded by saying: "Our statements in court are usually accepted as fact without using other evidence."

William Ammer, program chairman for Kiwanis, announced that the Rev. C. L. Harrison of Boys Industrial School in Lancaster would be the speaker when the annual Christmas party and Ladies Night will be held next Monday evening.

Labor Dispute Ruled Illegal

NEW LEXINGTON, Dec. 12.—Workers at the Claycraft Co.'s Shawnee plant are expected to return to work Thursday. An order by Common Pleas Judge U. S. McGonagle Tuesday put an end to an "illegitimate labor dispute" that has tied up operations since Nov. 8.

Workers voted to switch to United Mine Workers as its bargaining agent. The company refused to recognize the election because it was not sanctioned by the NLRB. The workers' agreement with AFL as agent expires Jan. 31, 1952.

Judge McGonagle said the UMW had been making unlawful demands on the company for recognition.

REBIRTH OF ROTTERDAM

Dutch City Turns War's Havoc Into Boon

By BOB J. BURANDT
Central Press Correspondent
ROTTERDAM, Holland—The indomitable Dutch of this city may have been "down" when Rotterdam was bombed into a shambles in 1940, but they weren't "out"—not by a long shot—for a gleaming new port and metropolis, Twentieth Century style, is swiftly rising from the ashes.

This Guardian City of the Rhine is in the midst of a renaissance from which it will emerge with an entirely different skyline, and a "new heart," as well.

This is Rotterdam, the "Gateway to Western Europe," where you can board a Rhine steamer for Bonn, Frankfurt, Strasbourg, or even Basel, Switzerland.

Rotterdam, port of call for 130 foreign steamship lines, home port for 30 lines. With a spotless international reputation as a "reliable harbor," and a unique system of customhouse facilities that makes it "freer than a free port."

The road to this favorable position on tomorrow's doorstep has been a weary and punishing one for 700,000 Rotterdammers since May 14, 1940.

That day, bombing squadrons of the German Luftwaffe smashed the heart of the city. Resulting fires completely destroyed the historical area, along with most of its civic and municipal organization facilities, shopping center, and focal points of cultural and social life. About 900 lives were lost.

INCLUDED among the destroyed buildings were 25,000 dwellings, 6,000 shop, store, workshop, factory, warehouse and office buildings, and more than 700 other buildings such as schools, churches, hospitals, newspapers, theaters, government and municipal headquarters, inns and hotels. Nearly 3,000 more dwellings were destroyed later during the war.

Then, during the five years of occupation, the Germans dismantled Rotterdam's harbor facilities, seized warehouse stocks and the entire fleet of sea-going, inland and Rhine vessels. In the fall of 1944 they blew up quays along the proud Nieuwe Waterweg (New Waterway) harbor channel that extends 16 miles to the North Sea. Even the remaining cranes and loading bridges were destroyed.

While the ruins of Rotterdam were still smoking, the Dutch city fathers started to plan for reconstruction. But real headway could not be made until after the liberation of The Netherlands, except for clearing away the wreckage.

Enough debris was removed to build a wall 45 miles long, 27 feet thick and 33 feet high.

Rebuilding of the all-important quays and shipping facilities of the New Waterway, along with reconstruction and expansion of industrial plants and buildings, has been the over-all No. 1 project so far.

Postwar tonnage over the New

Waterway docks has climbed rapidly to over half the record pre-war year, and the sea-going fleet is larger than ever.

There are adequate berthing accommodations for almost unlimited vessels, highspeed equipment for discharging and loading all types of cargo, and general service facilities for ships, cargoes and crews that are unsurpassed anywhere in the world.

A COMPLETE revival of the formerly immense Rhine river "transit traffic" with the German hinterland, especially with the industrial Ruhr areas, is anxiously hoped for. This will depend, of course, on the future course of political events in Western Germany.

Restoration of adequate private housing facilities for all families is next on the reconstruction program. This phase is already well underway, with the planning trend toward "suburban type" dwellings.

Finally will come the immense project of rebuilding the city's heart—the Coolingsingel—the street area which is to Rotterdam what the Loop is to Chicago.

Instead of the former triangle-

shaped, haphazardly-built city center, the "new look" will include a modern system of grouping for all buildings, and divided into two equal sections by the Coolingsingel boulevard.

ROTTERDAM is making the best of a terrible catastrophe by planning to correct many civic ills, housing, business and traffic difficulties which existed in the "old city."

Downtown traffic congestion will be minimized; a new central railway terminal will replace the old terminal; a new dyke on the Maas (Meuse) river waterway will prevent downtown floods; and industries formerly located downtown will be on the outskirts of Rotterdam.

The plans will be kept as flexible as possible so that they may be improved upon as the need arises and as new techniques are developed.

Even the city motto, "Stronger Through Struggle," has been changed. From now on, for full-steam-ahead Rotterdam, it's "Stronger and Younger Through Struggle!"

Collector Needs Another New Car

AKRON, Dec. 12.—City council has voted unanimously to buy a new car for Byron Hendricks, whose job is to collect from people who have not paid their parking tickets.

"He has worn out his present city car collecting on parking tickets," explained Walter B. Rice, clerk of courts. "Now he needs a new car so he can collect on more tickets."

Hendricks, described as having "the persistence of the Royal Canadian mounted police," collects about $20,000 a year for the city.

Question Is: Who Won Fuss?

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Laverne Murphy, 35, has obtained a divorce and custody of their five children on the grounds her husband was more interested in his ham radio station than supporting the family.

But hubby Frank, 66, got court permission to live the rest of his life in his radio shack on the family property. He operates Amateur Station W8ML.

Their house was placed in trust for the children. Mrs. Murphy thus will have a home at least until the youngest children, three-year-old George, becomes 21.

New Center Set

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Crile Veterans Administration hospital has announced the start of an $82,000 center for treatment of war veterans suffering from paraplegic paralysis—paralyzed from the waist down by spinal cord injuries. The project will be completed by Jan. 31.

Missionary List Growing Smaller

HONGKONG, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Chinese Communists efforts to drive the Catholic church out of China have reduced the number of foreign Catholic missionaries from almost 5,000 to 1,879.

Every day more are expelled or sent to jail to serve a term before they are expelled. Most Protestant missionaries have left China.

Judge Refuses Search Warrant

BUFFALO, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A local judge has refused to issue a search warrant for police to enter the home of a man who has obtained a federal wagering stamp.

Judge Michael Zimmer said he denied the request of Police Capt. Charles F. Schulz for a warrant because of "insufficient cause and proof." Zimmer also told Schulz: "You have to describe the gambling equipment you want to seize."

Change Denied

CANTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Judge George Graham has denied Leroy T. Schirack's request to move to another county his trial on charges of misconduct while an election official. Schirack, former Stark County election board clerk, goes on trial Monday.

REBIRTH OF ROTTERDAM

Dutch City Turns War's Havoc Into Boon

By BOB J. BURANDT
Central Press Correspondent

ROTTERDAM, Holland—The indomitable Dutch of this city may have been "down" when Rotterdam was bombed into a shambles in 1940, but they weren't "out"—not by a long shot—for a gleaming new port and metropolis, Twentieth Century style, is swiftly rising from the ashes.

This Guardian City of the Rhine is in the midst of a renaissance from which it will emerge with an entirely different skyline, and a "new heart," as well.

This is Rotterdam, the "Gateway to Western Europe," where you can board a Rhine steamer for Bonn, Frankfurt, Strasbourg, or even Basle, Switzerland.

Rotterdam, port of call for 130 foreign steamship lines, home port for 30 lines. With a spotless international reputation as a "reliable harbor," and a unique system of customhouse facilities that makes it "freer than a free port."

The road to this favorable position has been a weary and punishing one for 700,000 Rotterdammers since May 14, 1940.

That day, bombing squadrons of the German Luftwaffe smashed the heart of the city. Resulting fires completely destroyed the historical area, along with most of its civic and municipal organization facilities, shopping center, and focal points of cultural and social life. About 900 lives were lost.

INCLUDED among the destroyed buildings were 25,000 dwellings, 6,000 shop, store, workshop, factory, warehouse and office buildings, and more than 700 other buildings such as schools, churches, hospitals, newspapers, theaters, government and municipal headquarters, inns and hotels. Nearly 3,000 more dwellings were destroyed later during the war.

Then, during the five years of occupation, the Germans dismantled Rotterdam's harbor facilities, seized warehouse stocks and the entire fleet of sea-going, inland and Rhine vessels. In the fall of 1944 they blew up quays along the proud Nieuwe Waterweg (New Waterway) harbor channel that extends 16 miles to the North Sea. Even the remaining cranes and loading bridges were destroyed.

While the ruins of Rotterdam were still smoking, the Dutch city fathers started to plan for reconstruction. But real headway could not be made until after the liberation of The Netherlands, except for clearing away the wreckage. Enough debris was removed to build a wall 45 miles long, 27 feet thick and 33 feet high.

Rebuilding of the all-important quays and shipping facilities of the New Waterway, along with reconstruction and expansion of industrial plants and buildings, has been the over-all No. 1 project so far.

Postwar tonnage over the New

Waterway docks has climbed rapidly to over half the record pre-war year, and the sea-going fleet is larger than ever.

There are adequate berthing accommodations for almost unlimited vessels, highspeed equipment for discharging and loading all types of cargo, and general service facilities for ships, cargoes and crews that are unsurpassed anywhere in the world.

A COMPLETE revival of the formerly immense Rhine river "transit traffic" with the German hinterland, especially with the industrial Ruhr areas, is anxiously hoped for. This will depend, of course, on the future course of political events in Western Germany.

Restoration of adequate private housing facilities for all families is next on the reconstruction program. This phase is already well underway, with the planning trend toward "suburban type" dwellings.

Finally will come the immense project of rebuilding the city's heart—the Coolingsel—the street area which is to Rotterdam what the Loop is to Chicago.

Instead of the former triangle-

shaped, haphazardly-built city center, the "new look" will include a modern system of grouping for all buildings, and divided into two equal sections by the Coolingsel boulevard.

ROTTERDAM is making the best of a terrible catastrophe by planning to correct many civic ills, housing, business and traffic difficulties which existed in the "old city."

Downtown traffic congestion will be minimized; a new central railway terminal will replace the old poorly-linked system of numerous stations; a new dyke on the Maas (Meuse) river waterway will prevent downtown floods; and industries formerly located downtown will be on the outskirts of Rotterdam.

The plans so that they may be improved upon as the need arises and as new techniques are developed.

Even the city motto, "Stronger Through Struggle," has been changed. From now on, for full-steam-ahead Rotterdam, it's "Stronger and Younger Through Struggle!"

Collector Needs Another New Car

AKRON, Dec. 12—City council has voted unanimously to buy a new car for Byron Hendricks, whose job is to collect from people who have not paid their parking tickets.

"He has worn out his present city car collecting on parking tickets," explained Walter B. Rice, clerk of courts. "Now he needs a new car so he can collect on more tickets."

Hendricks, described as having "the persistence of the Royal Canadian mounted police," collects about $20,000 a year for the city.

Question Is: Who Won Fuss?

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12—Mrs. Laverne Murphy, 35, has obtained a divorce and custody of their five children on the grounds her husband was more interested in his ham radio station than supporting the family.

But hubby Frank, 66, got court permission to live the rest of his life in his radio shack on the family property. He operates Amateur Station W8ML.

His house was placed in trust for the children. Mrs. Murphy will have a home at least until the youngest child, three-year-old George, becomes 21.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12—The Cleveland Veterans Administration hospital has announced the start of an $82,000 center for treatment of war veterans suffering from paraplegic paralysis—paralyzed from the waist down by spinal cord injuries. The project will be completed by Jan. 31.

Fliers Find Day Is Night In Higher Altitudes

Editor's Note: The following is the second in a series of articles on current studies at the U. S. Air Force School of Aviation Medicine.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 12—(AP)—Our military fliers are entering altitudes where day and night exist side by side simultaneously—where you cannot see well inside your cabin in broad daylight unless your lights are on.

Our manned rockets are reaching for a still more astonishing place—where the thing you see out in front of you may be actually behind you.

The U. S. Air Force School of Aviation Medicine here at Randolph Field is studying these problems, because some of them already are of practical importance. The studies are directed by Paul A. Cibis, M. D., research fellow in the department of ophthalmology.

WHERE THERE is no air there is no such thing as the daylight we know. Our atmosphere reflects sunlight and diffuses it so that daylight comes at us from every direction.

When planes fly very high, the patches of light made by sunshine through cabin windows appear excessively bright. They have a glare almost annoying to the eyes. All other parts of the cabin are shrouded in nighttime darkness, except where the glare reflects like a searchlight beam. There is not enough air in the small space of a cabin to diffuse the sunlight.

The remedy is either the cabin lights, or glass or plastic windows that diffuse the sunlight as it enters.

High altitude fliers have reported that even small objects seen in sunlight are annoyingly bright to their eyes.

Another discovery by fliers is the upside-down treatment for improving seeing. This happens when planes are flying in dim light, with the horizon just visible far ahead and below. After a while the pilot can no longer see the horizon. He then flips his plane upside-down, and can see it again. After an upside-down light, the pilot once more can see the horizon from rightside up.

LABORATORY experiments found the explanation. The dim horizon is seen by the nerves around the outside of the retina, the curtain in the back of the eye. The horizon is below the pane, so it is seen by the upper part of the retina. After long looking, this part of the retina loses its ability to see well. By turning upside down the pilot receives the horizon light on the fresh, lower part of the retina. The upper retina gets a rest and then can see again.

Our fastest planes are exceeding the speed of the eye. It takes eyes about a tenth of a second to see.

This is the time for the chemicals to act in the retina and for the sight impulses to travel along the nerves to the brain.

This delay in seeing is becoming important for present fliers, and will cause risks when we go still faster. Dr. Cibis says that at 2,200 miles an hour the pilot will travel about 300 feet during one-tenth of a second.

If an object that he is going to pass close by comes into view at 150 feet ahead, it will be 150 feet behind before he sees it at all. And it will still look as if it is ahead.

IF HE FLIES through a cloud nearly 300 feet thick, he will be outside the cloud before he can see that he is in it—that is, has been inside.

These delays in seeing apply only to objects that are bright and easy to see. For dim objects the delay is longer, and the delay distances at 2,200 miles an hour are 600 to 900 feet. Already we appear to be more than half way to that speed in diving our manned rocket ships.

Present jets and bombers are giving our men occasional thrills of the frightening sort that react on their physical condition. For military flying it is important to detect these letdowns.

Charles Allison, Ex-Grid Star, Home On Leave

Charles C. Allison, 20, former Circleville high school football player, is home on leave from the U. S. Marine Corps.

Allison recently was promoted to the rank of private first class in the Marines after completing a rigid "boot camp" training course in Parris Island, S. C.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allison of 677 East Mound street, the Circleville marine climaxed his recruit training by winning the sharp shooter medal on the rifle range when he fired a score of 210 out of a possible 250 during his weapons training.

DURING the past eight weeks of recruit training, as a result of field experience and classroom lectures, the new Marine has become well versed in precision drill, first aid, hygiene, and field tactics. In addition to firing the Garand rifle for qualification, Allison fired other infantry weapons such as the 45 calibre pistol, carbine and Browning automatic rifle. He also witnessed demonstration firing of the machine gun, mortar and flame thrower.

Allison entered the Marine Corps September 29. He was employed by Circleville Lamp Works as a stock clerk before he entered the Marines.

Allison is to report back to duty next weekend.

A SOB STORY related with angelic smiles to Judge George T. Murphy of Detroit by five kids gets Merrill Bolstar, 40, out of jail. The three Bolstar children were aided by two friends who posed as Bolstars. The five kids went to court in patched clothes and with faces smudged and offered $5 to "get daddy out of jail." Bolstar was jailed for brawling with a neighbor. The court freed the man and told the youngsters to keep the $5. When the judge learned of the deception, he said, "Well, if he's a great guy with his family, it's OK with me." Campaign Starts Against Oak Wilt COLUMBUS, Dec. 12—(AP)—The Ohio Forestry Association—alarmed at inroads of oak wilt in Ohio forests—has opened a campaign to raise $135,000 for operations in 1952.

The association plans to use $67,000, nearly half its 1952 budget, for research, field work and eradication of the wilt, a disease that threatens the state's oak trees, the heart of Ohio's timber industry.

A part of the campaign against oak wilt will come next spring when a survey will be started, aimed at locating infected trees and stopping spread of the disease.

YELLOW PERIL
THOSE who have been on this mortal sphere a considerable period of time have heard of the yellow peril. Repeated warnings were given in the past that Oriental hordes would eventually swarm through the Western world, destroy its civilization, and virtually enslave the white races.

Americans were never greatly impressed, feeling secure in the strength of their own country. They preferred to believe those who boasted that two divisions of American troops could whip China hands down.

Under the sponsorship of Russia, the Orientals are swarming, and are bringing into actual focus the danger against which there have been warnings throughout the years. They engage this nation in a war without purpose or possibilities.

At this moment the United States is defending itself in a long-drawn-out conference with Chinese Reds at Panmunjom who are demanding concessions which, if granted, would amount to virtual surrender by U.S. forces.

The United States is not making its defense at Geneva, The Hague or before the United Nations, but in the mud and squalor of a land in which this country can have no interest.

Why is this? Where is that boasted superiority of wealth and production? Has America wasted its substance in political manipulation, instead of building strength against an enemy which has been a menace for years?

Is this the strongest nation in the world, or has it degenerated to the point where it must take orders from barbarians.

A SCHEME THAT FAILED
THOSE who are willing to admit that the government has attempted to stabilize wages and prices in a move against inflation must wonder what happened to the plan, and why it hasn't brought the desired results. Obviously, when costs go up prices must go up, and that is what is happening.

There is a factor in increasing costs little known or understood except by those in business. This is the enormous amount of paper work entailed in the effort to comply with wage and hour regulations. As part of the cost of doing business under controls, three additional bookkeeping operations must be taken into account in determining price ceilings.

One large corporation reveals government regulations have cost is $400,000 in overtime. This, of course, is passed on to the consumer.

Because of the involved situation, which entails the necessity of obtaining decisions from various boards and bureaus, business has been further burdened by legal expenses and the cost of journeys to Washington for advice and explanation of the complicated rules.

Regardless of how well intentioned the government was in setting up wage and price controls, it has defeated its own purpose by complicating a situation which ordinarily would have been solved by the rule of supply and demand.

Some New Tales For Dinner Talk
NEW YORK. — (AP) — Are your dinner invitations falling off? Don't people ask you to their parties anymore? Maybe it's because you need to brush up on your raconteur-ing. Your twice-told tales have gone the rounds too often.

So today we offer you—free—two of the best stories we've heard lately, and you're welcome to them. If you've already heard them, don't write and tell us they're old. Everything is getting older these days.

The first concerns the Army colonel's wife, stationed in the Philippines in the years before the last war. She had the kind of cook women dream of—a Chinese named Mr. Ling, who could dish up a dream meal for one unexpected guest, or a dozen, on quick notice.

One evening, however, she was

George E. Sokolsky's
These Days
Nearly every town has its woman's club and if I refer especially to the one in Scarsdale, N.Y., it is only because they have projected themselves into the controversy over American education. They objected to Rabbi Benjamin Schultz lecturing on schools and the Communist invasion of our schools without the other side being presented at the same meeting. How can there be another side to this question?

President Robert G. Sproul, of the University of California, put this issue in these words:

"Historically, Americans have taken their freedom for granted. In recent years, we have learned that we were wrong—that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned, too, that our particular kind of freedom is seriously threatened by the power philosophy of that international conspiracy mislabeled as the Communist Party—a philosophy that sterilizes the minds and distorts the morals of men, that sets class against class, brother against brother, and man against God. If this philosophy were confined to one nation, or even to a group of nations, and practiced only within their borders, it might be of little more than academic concern to us. The fact is, that the philosophy is being used as the basis of a power and propaganda drive for the creation of police states and the establishment by any means, including violence, of a new science of economics and a new form of society."

As the level on which this work of the devil starts is the kindergarten and as it is carried through the entire life of our nation, it becomes increasingly important to study the schools to which we entrust our children, the textbooks they use, the methods that are employed to weaken character, lessen their bonds to tradition, and divorce them from faith in God and love for country.

I read the year-book of the Scarsdale Woman's Club and find a commendable organization serving the community in many aspects. Scarsdale is one of those bedroom suburbs of New York City where those who can afford to work in the big city and enjoy suburban life, buy their own homes, furnish them tastefully, carefully keep gardens and compete in homemade cuisine fancifully garnished. Such people dislike being regarded as Communists or even Left-Wingers. They object to their patriotism being questioned. Many vote Republican. Most think that they are Liberals. Mrs. Gilladys F. Carroll, president of this club, wrote this paragraph as a foreword to the report:

"This year marks the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of the independence of our country. It was through faith and courage that this nation was founded. The faith of our fathers is still one of our great remaining forces. Let us cherish this precious heritage."

Yet, in two recent situations, this club ranged itself on the side of ignoring the menace of the corruption of the life of our nation through Communist infiltration. It is the same puzzling phenomenon as a proposition recently made by a motion picture company, whose affairs I am investigating, that those who oppose Communism in motion pictures, limit their objections to pictures made since April 1951. Why that date? Why not any other date? If the thing is evil, does the date matter?

These puzzles require analysis. It is absurd to speak about "Park Avenue Liberals" without asking why their brand of liberalism only serves the Communists but never serves those who are fighting the Communist infiltration into our schools, or even the substitution of functional training for character building.

DIET AND HEALTH
Patience And Praise Help In Correcting This Difficulty
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THERE are few mothers who, at some time or another, are not troubled with bed-wetting in their babies, and parents who have a child who wets the bed find this habit an unpleasant one. Unfortunately, the treatment they adopt often tends to make the condition worse instead of better. At times they even do things which tend to bring on the habit.

For example, a child is not, as a rule, expected to keep his bed dry at night before he is about two years of age. Yet many parents begin to scold or even punish young children when they wet the bed at an earlier age.

Control By Two
Under ordinary conditions, a child can control his bladder almost completely during the day by the time he is two years old.

Although many studies have been made of children who wet the bed, the exact cause of bed-wetting has not as yet been found. It is true that in certain cases it may be due to infections in the bladder or kidney; then, too, general disorders, such as epilepsy or other diseases which damage the nervous system, may be responsible. Sometimes it may begin as a result of emotional upsets which have occurred during a severe illness.

Training Method
Proper training may be helpful in keeping this disorder from developing. One method of training suggested is to have the child wear a diaper during his waking hours after he is a year old. Then he should be placed on the toilet to empty his bladder at regular intervals—every four hours at first, and then less often as bladder control develops.

By the time the child is two years old, he is often able to tell his parents when he wants to go to the toilet. When the youngster can do this, the diaper can be removed during his daytime naps; then, several months after this, the diapers may be left off at night.

Fluids Restricted
One important rule to remember is to praise the child for keeping dry, and not scold or punish him for failures. If the child suffers from bed-wetting, the amount of fluid given at the evening meal may be restricted. It is helpful, also, to waken him once during the night and put him on the toilet to empty his bladder.

Praise and patience can usually bring about a cure. Whipping, scolding, threatening and shaming not only do not solve the problem, but lead to mental conflicts.

Of course, the child who wets the bed should be kept under the careful guidance of the doctor. His advice is often invaluable to the mother and the child.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
R. W.: Could a low blood count cause ringing in the ears and difficulty in hearing?
Answer: It is not likely that the low blood count or anemia is the cause of the symptoms you describe. The condition may be due to an inner ear disturbance or to some nerve disorder.

Miss Doctor

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE
WHEN a few days later, Dr. Brooks returned from New York, she went straight to the hospital, where she checked on things, then went over to her office, leaving a scribbled note in Peter's mailbox, telling him that she was home. He'd get in touch with her—

Her mail attended to at the office, she went to the apartment, where Hazel greeted her warmly, and urged her to bathe and rest a little before she ate dinner. "You look tired, Miss Doctor."

"Oh, goodness, do I?"

"Yes'm. It takes it out of a person to travel."

Mollie laughed, but believed her enough to spend considerable care upon her person; she didn't want Peter to find her looking tired. Perhaps he would come in time to eat dinner with her; she hoped Hazel had enough—she hurried the rest of her dressing, selecting the white robe with its especially becoming rolled collar.

It was after eight, and Hazel had gone, when Peter finally rang her bell. He stood in the hall, grinning, exuberant. Cheeks red, hair a bit ruffled, wearing one of his worst sweaters, and with corduroys tucked into galoshes. He'd never looked more boyish, more naive and more earnest.

"Hi, Mollie!" he cried, and bent his head to kiss her cheek. It was a casual kiss—such as he might have given his mother.

"Do you have a good time?"

Peter asked; then, before she could answer, he indicated his thumping boots. "I'm going skating," he announced. "Had to stop in to see you for a minute, though. You ever skate, Mollie?"

A steel-like rod of anger stiffened her spine. "You'll find quite old ladies skating on Round Pond," she said tartly.

Peter laughed, and stretched his feet out before him. His sweater was white, with a design of hearts and flowers in red. It looked both Scandinavian and Pennsylvania Dutch, and it looked horrible against the rose satin chair in which he had chosen to sit.

He was laughing at Mollie.

"Then I guess I can take you skating there sometime," he told her. "What a way to talk! Old ladies! You look wonderful, Mollie."

"Thank you, Peter," she said, regretting her dash of temper. "And I'd love to go skating with you."

"We'll do it one of these evenings, then. Tonight I'm going with Jamie."

"Jamie?"

"Yep. She skates like a breeze now. We've gone every night this week. Ice has been swell. Got these sweaters to match—pretty snazzy, hmhm?"

Snazzy was exactly the word. But for a rising young doctor who wanted to learn sophistication and acquire poise, neither the sweater nor the language was appropriate. "Peter..." Mollie began, though her better judgment warned her that this was no time...

"You know Jamie's the one I told you about—works in the dietetic department," Peter was saying enthusiastically. "Dark brown hair, really cute figure—not too heavy on brains. I mean, she's no career woman! Not a bit like Liz Ragsdale."

Things were going so differently from the way Mollie had planned them. Peter's talk was uneasy, and Mollie could think of nothing she wanted to say.

"I had dinner with her and Ragsdale, the night after you left," Peter was telling her.

"Did you?"

"Yes. You talked about him, you know, and I thought you wanted me to keep an eye on things in your wards..."

Mollie had suggested nothing of the sort.

"So—I went over to Children's on the excuse of inviting him to dinner. He said he had a date with his wife, and of course—"

"Do you feel I owe you the price of the dinner check?"

He grinned at her; he knew a joke when he heard one.

"Was it an interesting party?"

Mollie asked, with an odd sense of making conversation.

"Peter shrugged. "It went all right. Ragsdale and I talked a bit of shop. Liz—well—she's not my dish. Other men think so. Lord, you couldn't hear yourself think for the wolf howls at the hotel!"

"Don't the men know Ragsdale? And didn't they know she was his wife?"

He laughed indulgently. "That sort of dame, Mollie—being anybody's wife makes no difference."

"What a nasty thing to say!"

"I don't mean it that way. But her type—well, it's hard to explain to a woman—"

"Don't say things like that to me, Peter!" said Mollie sharply.

He glanced up. "Oh, I know—My mother says there's nothing I can't tell her, but I wasn't very old when I found out I'd better select my topics of conversation carefully."

Mollie did not speak. There was nothing she could say. This was the boy whom she'd planned to teach!

Peter glanced at his watch. "Tell me about your trip," he urged. Politely.

Mollie turned the heavy gold bracelet on her arm, looked at it. "I did the usual things. I presented my cases; did pretty well, I think. I attended lectures, a round table, saw three demonstrations, went to one cocktail party, saw a couple of shows—came home."

"Well, it's good to have you back. I've missed you." He spoke so sincerely that Mollie was instantly charmed and able to believe him. "You don't know what your friendliness has meant to me, Mollie. At first, I couldn't believe it—that you and I—but I guess I can count on it now, eh?"

"You know you can, Peter."

His answering smile deeply creased his cheeks. "Good!" he said heartily. "Because I'm going to ask a big favor of you, Mollie?"

"Yes?" she said warily.

He leaned toward her, his hands clasped behind his knees. "You remember, don't you, that you know so well how to do things of this sort..."

"What sort?"

He laughed. "I've started from the wrong end, haven't I? Well, you see—" He got to his feet. "I—I want to give a party. A small dinner party. I—I'd like to do it in my rooms. I think it could be managed—if you'd help me."

"Do you want me to cook or wash dishes or both?" she asked happily, leaning back to look up at him.

He sat down beside her. "You may have to do both," he promised. "And more. I don't know from nothing about giving a party."

He was a darling! Naive, blundering—but sweet.

"I'll help you, Peter," she promised. "But tell me what you want."

"Well, first, do you think it could be done at my place?"

"Not too much of a party, but I think one could be managed if your plans weren't too ambitious. You'd have to keep the thing within bounds; you've really only the one room and a limited amount of seating space."

"I'll have to borrow your forks. You can be pink strings on yours."

"Mine are all marked 'B' for borrowed."

He laughed delightedly. "You're wonderful!"

"I can do better than that. I hope. Now, let's see—seriously, I mean. I know of a caterer who does casserole dinners—that might be the best way to swing this. It would be effective in your place—got a bright tablecloth; your centerpiece could be homespun. I mean, a wooden salad bowl with oranges and crook-necked squash."

He was frowning.

"Don't like that, eh?" she asked.

"Well, it sounds all right, Mollie. And I know it would be smart if you did it. But—you see—this is to be a combination birthday and Valentine party. I want to give it in honor of Jamie's birthday. And it comes on February 14; that's Valentine's day—so—"

Mollie held one clenched, cold fist tightly in her other hand. A pink party! A pink party for Jamie!

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

When a few days later, Dr. Brooks returned from New York, she went straight to the hospital, where she checked on things, then went over to her office, leaving a scribbled note in Peter's mailbox, telling him that she was home. He'd get in touch with her—

Her mail attended to at the office, she went to the apartment, where Hazel greeted her warmly, and urged her to bathe and rest a little before she ate dinner.

"You look tired, Miss Doctor."

"Oh, goodness, do I?"

"Yes'm. It takes it out of a person to travel."

Mollie laughed, but believed her enough to spend considerable care upon her person; she didn't want Peter to find her looking tired. Perhaps he would come in time to eat dinner with her; she hoped Hazel had enough—She hurried the rest of her dressing, selecting the white more robe with its especially becoming rolled collar.

It was after eight, and Hazel had gone, when Peter finally rang her bell. He stood in the hall, grinning, exuberant. Cheeks red, hair a bit ruffled, wearing one of his worst sweaters, and with corduroys tucked into galoshes. He'd never looked more boyish, more naive and—exuberant.

"Hi, Mollie!" he cried, and bent his head to kiss her cheek. It was a casual kiss—such as he might have given his mother.

"Do you have a good time?" Peter asked; then, before she could answer, he indicated his thumping boots. "I'm going skating," he announced. "Had to stop in to see you for a minute, though. You ever skate, Mollie?"

A steel-like rod of anger stiffened her spine. "You'll find quite old ladies skating on Round Pond," she said tartly.

Peter laughed, and stretched his feet out before him. His sweater was white, with a design of hearts and flowers in red. It looked both Scandinavian and Pennsylvania Dutch, and it looked horrible against the rose satin chair in which he had chosen to sit.

He was laughing at Mollie. "Then I guess I can take you skating there sometime," he told her. "What a way to talk! Old ladies! You look wonderful, Mollie."

"Thank you, Peter," she said, regretting her flash of temper. "And I'd love to go skating with you."

"We'll do it one of these evenings, then. Tonight I'm going with Jamie."

"Jamie?"

"Yep. She skates like a breeze now. We've gone every night this week. Ice has been swell. Got these sweaters to match—pretty snazzy, huh?"

Swazzy was exactly the word. But for a rising young doctor who wanted to learn sophistication and acquire poise, neither the sweater nor the language was appropriate. "Peter..." Mollie began, though her better judgment warned her that this was no time...

"You know Jamie's the one I told you about—works in the dietetic department," Peter was saying enthusiastically. "Dark brown hair, really cute figure—not too heavy on brains. I mean, she's no career woman! Not a bit like Liz Ragsdale."

Things were going so differently from the way Mollie had planned them. Peter's talk was uneasy, and Mollie could think of nothing she wanted to say.

"I had dinner with her and Ragsdale, the night after you left," Peter was telling her.

"Did you?"

"Yes. You talked about him, you know, and I thought you wanted me to keep an eye on things in your wards..."

Mollie had suggested nothing of the sort.

"So—I went over to Children's on the excuse of inviting him to dinner. He said he had a date with his wife, and, of course—"

"Do you feel I owe you the price of the dinner check?"

He grinned at her; he knew a joke when he heard one.

"Was it an interesting party?" Mollie asked, with an odd sense of making conversation.

"Peter shrugged. "It went all right. Ragsdale and I talked a bit of shop. Liz—well, she's not my dish. Other men think so. Lord, you couldn't hear yourself think for the wolf howls at the hotel!"

"Don't the men know Ragsdale? And didn't they know she was his wife?"

He laughed indulgently. "That sort of dame, Mollie—being anybody's wife makes no difference."

"What a nasty thing to say! I don't mean it that way. But her type—well, it's hard to explain to a woman—it's hard to explain to a woman."

"Don't say things like that to me, Peter!" said Mollie sharply.

He glanced up. "Oh, I know—My mother says there's nothing I can't tell her, but I wasn't very old when I found out I'd better select my topics of conversation carefully."

Mollie did not speak. There was nothing she could say. This was the boy whom she'd planned to teach!

Peter glanced at his watch. "Tell me about your trip," he urged. Politely.

Mollie turned the heavy gold bracelet on her arm, looked at it. "I did the usual things. I presented my cases; did pretty well. I think. I attended lectures, a round table, saw three demonstrations, went to one cocktail party, saw a couple of shows—came home."

"Well, it's good to have you back. I've missed you." He spoke so sincerely that Mollie was instantly charmed and able to believe him. "You don't know what your friendliness has meant to me, Mollie. At first, I couldn't believe it—that you and I—but I guess I can count on it now, eh?"

"You know you can, Peter."

His answering smile deeply creased his cheeks. "Good!" he said heartily. "Because I'm going to ask a big favor of you, Mollie?"

Her brows drew together. "Yes?" she said warily.

He leaned toward her, his hands clasped between his knees. "You remember, don't you, that you said you would help me? You know so well how to do things of this sort..."

"What sort?"

He laughed. "I've started from the wrong end, haven't I? Well, you see—" He got to his feet. "I want to give a party. A small dinner party. I—I'd like to do it in my rooms. I think it could be managed—if you'd help me."

"Do you want me to cook or wash dishes or both?" she asked happily, leaning back to look up at him.

He sat down beside her. "You may have to do both," he promised. "And more. I don't know from nothing about giving a party."

He was a darling! Naive, blundering—but sweet.

"I'll help you, Peter," she promised. "But tell me what you want."

"Well, first, do you think it could be done at my place?"

"Not too much of a party, but I think one could be managed if your plans weren't too ambitious. You'd have to keep the thing within bounds; you've really only the one room and a limited amount of seating space."

"I'll have to borrow your forks. You can let pink strings on yours."

"Mine are all marked 'B' for borrowed."

He laughed delightedly. "You're wonderful!"

"I can do better than that. I hope. Now, let's see—seriously, I mean. I know of a caterer who does casserole dinners—that might be the best way to swing this. It would be effective in your place—get a bright tablecloth; your centerpiece could be homespun. I mean, a wooden salad bowl with oranges and crook-necked squash."

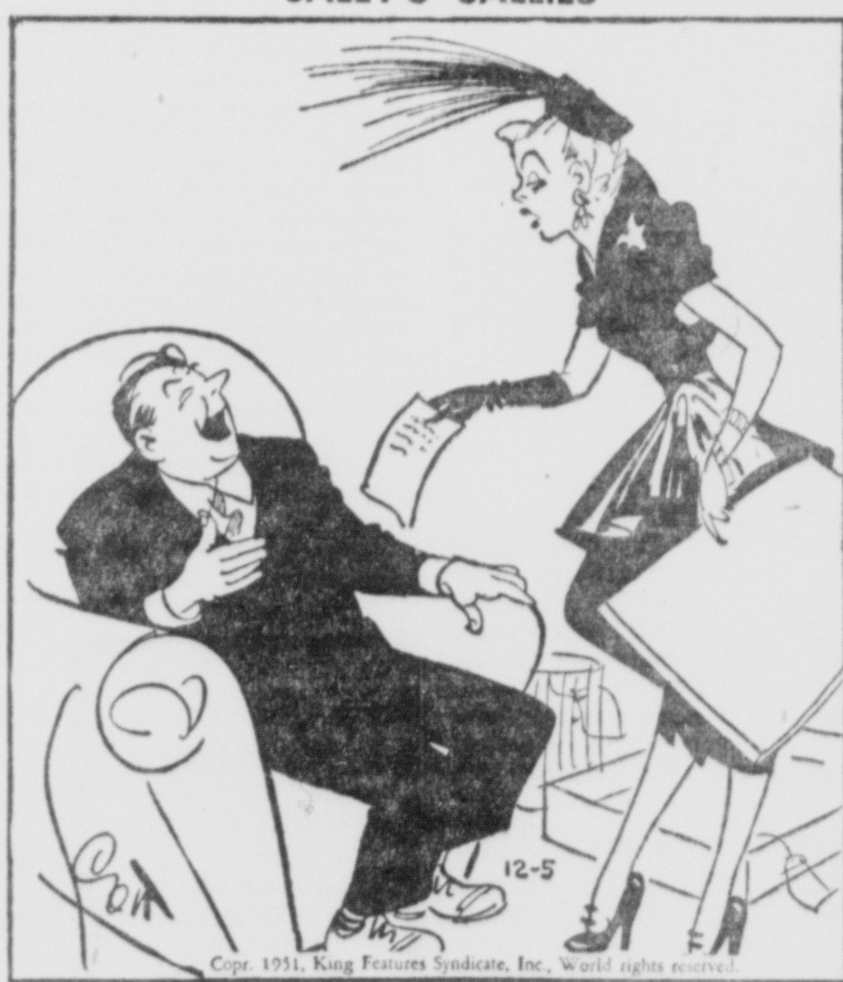

He was frowning.

"Don't like that, eh?" she asked. "Well, it sounds all right, Mollie. And I know it would be smart if you did it. But—you see—this is to be a combination birthday and Valentine party. I want to give it in honor of Jamie's birthday. And it comes on February 14; that's Valentine's day—so—"

Mollie held one clenched, cold fist tightly in her other hand. A pink party! A pink party for Jamie!

'Land of Pumpkins,' Hailed By California Resident

Circleville, "Land of the Pumpkins," as she calls it, is the former home of Mrs. Robert Rasor of Monterey, Calif.

She and her husband, who is a native of Columbus, are completely captivated by the country since their arrival there last Spring when he was recalled into the Army and stationed at Fort Ord.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Rasor became a model and later after a move to Monterey, Marjorie remembered the advice of her father, the late William I. Spangler, state senator from Ohio, about going into business for oneself and bought a telephone answering and baby sitting agency.

The business has expanded to include a practical nurse registry, an employment agency and a gift wrapping service. Mrs. Rasor is taking courses in practical nursing at Monterey Peninsula hospital whenever she can get away from her always-ringing telephones.

Mrs. Rasor's brother, Marshall Spangler, was the first member of the family to live in California. He is now living in Casablanca, Africa, where his wife and baby recently joined him.

When Mr. Spangler departed for Africa, he left his mother, Mrs. William Spangler, with the Rasors, and she also lives near the telephones.

Getting back to Circleville, Mrs. Rasor expressed surprise that more Westerners don't know about pumpkin blossom fritters. Although it's a little late, here in Ohio for blossoms of any kind, Mrs. Rasor sends the following recipe which she loves to serve her friends in the West:

Beat 2 eggs and 1 cup of milk together and slowly add 1/2 cup of flour, making a fairly thin batter. Dip 1 pumpkin blossom at a time into the batter, or gently stir a number of blossoms into it and spoon into a frying pan which has been greased with bacon drippings. She writes that: "These fritters are like nothing else in the world."

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

The child whose discerning mother cultivates rich resources for winning his cooperation is fortunate.

Beginning even before her baby can talk, she cuddles him tenderly as she cares for him, talks to him about what she is doing for him, says rhymes to him, sings lullabies to him, gives him gentle pats, smiles and tender words of approval for the little ways in which he helps feed or dress himself or cooperates on the nursery chair. She thanks him smilingly when he hands her some small object he finds on the floor. She enjoys his cooing, babbling and later use of words. As he can gesture or speak a question, she answers it kindly.

Never does she make him feel at the age of two, six, fourteen or later, that anything he asks or says seriously—and he is nearly always serious—is unworthy of her consideration and honest response. She never, therefore, makes him self-conscious about his speech or feel afraid he might be ridiculed.

THIS MOTHER enjoys her little child's fun at handling blocks and other playthings, which gradually develops from crude manipulation to simple and then more complicated forms of creative play. When he begins to scribble and then to draw and color with crayons, she expresses pleasure over his achievements. No matter how little his creation from things or marks is like the thing she calls it, she is able to see and appreciate it. When he makes articles and pictures for her, she keeps them and cherishes the gifts as his creations, whether he is four or fourteen, until he is willing to have her dispose of them.

Wise was the grandmother, who, when her grandson, three, said excitedly, "I shot a bear last night with my gun," replied appreciatively, "You did!" Such a mother or grandmother enjoys the toddler's yarns of fancy. Some of them she writes down as he creates them. Later she may read them to him and still later, he may enjoy reading them himself, even to his own children by and by.

When he dramatizes, she responds as he wishes her to respond and plays the parts which he assigns to her. She drinks imaginary tea which he serves her from a real or imaginary cup. She reacts to his imaginary creatures as if they were real. She never forces him to think he has been lying through his imaginary ways, when for him he has never before been nearer the truth.

She enjoys with him his Santa Claus and the stories he likes best. But as soon as he asks her if such fanciful creatures are real, she calmly answers, "No, but we have been just playing that they are." Then she goes on pretending the realities of certain characters and statements in the folklore and fairy tales she reads to him.

She knows he will have no trouble by and by of confusing facts and fantasies. She knows that if he handles tools and makes real things and plays normally with other children of his age, all the matters will clear up for him. The discerning father does likewise. And what resources exist for his companionship and cooperation!

Looking Ahead

By George Benson
President
Hardin College

A group of university professors conducted a radio panel discussion on a New Orleans station a few nights ago. When teachers get together in such manner, and discuss frankly and publicly some of the faults of their own profession, the results can be of value not only to the school people but to the parents and the general public. The question discussed was:

Are our schools turning out young men and women unable to work the simple arithmetic problems they meet in everyday life? The agreed opinion on the question was, "Yes—they are." The professors were from Loyola and Tulane Universities. Also on the panel was a Loyola student representative who can't work simple arithmetic. He based his opinion on his own experience with students in his own college.

One of the important facts brought out came from a test given this year to 400 high school graduates who entered the freshman class of one of the New Orleans colleges. The test was in simple arithmetic. Yet, of the 400 freshmen taking it, 180 failed!

THE PROFESSORS were of the opinion that similar weaknesses were to be found among students throughout the country. Therefore, the major part of the discussion was given over to the question of "Where is education failing?" There seemed to be general agreement that teachers nowadays are themselves being taught "too much about new methods of teaching and not enough about the basic subjects themselves." The professors were also of the opinion that "so many new things are being brought into the grade school and high school curriculums that basic 'tool' subjects are neglected."

Panel members were of the opinion that this neglect of basic subjects was due, at the grade school and high school level, to the return of "progressive education" in varying degrees.

"Progressive education," which had a short-lived popularity early in the century, was fostered by Wm. H. Kilpatrick and John Dewey at Teachers college, Columbia university. These educational "moderns" placed greatest importance on new methods of teaching, almost discarded the basic orthodox studies of reading, writing and arithmetic, and declared there were no fundamental truths.

At various points around the country controversy has been stirred up in recent years over claims of parents that certain teaching practices and even some of the basic philosophy of "progressive education" had been quietly worked into school courses of study without the knowledge or consent of school patrons generally.

HATEVER THE outcome of such controversies there are examples, besides the ones cited by the New Orleans professors, of a serious failing somewhere along the line in many schools.

The Babson Institute in Massachusetts made a study of the level of knowledge of 30,000 students in 100 New England schools and reported the average schoolboy could not read well and that "many high school graduates cannot solve a simple arithmetic problem." In Los Angeles, to silence parental objections to some "progressive" methods used in the school system, the school authorities themselves have just conducted an examination of 11,000 high school juniors.

To their surprise and embarrassment, they found that 18 per cent of the juniors did not know how many months there are in a year, 16 per cent didn't know the number of days in the year, 600 couldn't work a simple arithmetic problem such as dividing 70 by two, and about 400 couldn't tell the time of day on a clock.

It would seem therefore that we need more self-critical radio panels such as the one in New Orleans. And above all we need somehow to encourage the intelligent, active interest of all school patrons—at the primary, the high school and college levels.

GE Raise Needs WSB Approval

Only Wage Stabilization Board approval is needed before the 3.58 per cent wage increase between the General Electric company and the UE union is effective.

E. G. Grigg, manager of the Cincinnati Lamp Works said Wednesday that some confusion had arisen over the UE agreement of last Saturday. He explained that the local lamp works has had a wage increase before the WSB for several months.

The raise would be retroactive to Sept. 15. There is no union at the local plant, but the raise would be paid here as well as in most other GE plants throughout the country after WSB approval.

Prom-time brings this question: When Girl invites Boy to a dance given by her school, class or club, who pays for the tickets, transportation, etc.?

Some girls decide that perhaps they'd better skip the whole idea and miss the dance, rather than risk a gruesome mistake. But when you know exactly what's expected of you and your escort, it's too much fun to miss. So here's how.

Invite him at least two weeks in advance if it's a "formal," giving him all the "when, where and what time" details, adding, "It will be fun if you can go." If he says yes, Girl buys the tickets and arranges to exchange dances with other couples; Boy is her guest.

But Boy is also her escort, so he provides transportation whether it's the family car or bus fares. If he's from out of town, Girl can arrange for a ride with friends.

He calls for Girl at her house, bringing or sending a corsage. She greets him at the door and introduces him to her parents, if they haven't already met him. She also remembers to introduce him to other girls and boys at the dance, introducing him to the girl first, then to the boy.

If Boy comes from out of town to attend the dance, he pays for his transportation from his city to yours by train, bus or plane. We invite friends to come to see us, but do not pay their fare. Unless in unusual cases when you know that he or she cannot come otherwise. The rule is the same when a girl is invited to a boy's school.

Looking Ahead

By George Benson
President
Hardin College

A group of university professors conducted a radio panel discussion on a New Orleans station a few nights ago. When teachers get together in such manner, and discuss frankly and publicly some of the faults of their own profession, the results can be of value not only to the school people but to the parents and the general public. The question discussed was:

Are our schools turning out young men and women unable to work the simple arithmetic problems they meet in everyday life?

The agreed opinion on the question was, "Yes—they are." The professors were from Loyola and Tulane Universities. Also on the panel was a Loyola student representative who can't work simple arithmetic. He based his opinion on his own experience with students in his own college.

One of the important facts brought out came from a test given this year to 400 high school graduates who entered the freshman class of one of the New Orleans colleges. The test was in simple arithmetic. Yet, of the 400 freshmen taking it, 180 failed!

Dale Bruce, Wesleyan's Star, Tops Ohio Conference Grid '11'
COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—(P)—Dale Bruce, sensational end of Ohio Wesleyan's champions, paces the top 11 grid stars named to the 1951 Associated Press Ohio Conference all-star grid team.

Bruce, Little All-America choice this year, was the only unanimous nominee as the coaches of the sprawling loop picked the poll.

Wesleyan, only unbeaten-untied team in the circuit, won three spots on the first team and two on the second to dominate the all-star squad just as Coach Glen Fraser's "happy-go-lucky" Battling Bishops dominated the big loop during the campaign.

Paul Yackey, Heidelberg's great halfback who led the league in scoring with 132 points, won a ball-toting berth alongside Muskingum's Don Pinney, who contributed

Stoutsville '5' Earns 42-41 Win Over Carroll
Stoutsville's Indian cagers outlasted host Carroll Tuesday night to rack up their third straight Fairfield County League victory by a 42-41 margin on the Carroll hardwood.

The Stoutsvillers led all of the way during the encounter, going into the final frame with a seemingly comfortable 39-26 lead.

Carroll rallied for its home fans during the final period, however, to pull up to within one point of the victory as gametime ran out.

Roger Valentine and Boyd Marshall tied for individual scoring honors for Stoutsville during the encounter with 12 points each, while Carroll's Bradford won game honors with 14 points.

Liberty Union, also undefeated in Fairfield League play to date, will invade Stoutsville Friday for a crucial loop engagement. Box score of Tuesday's Indian win follows:

8 Indians Get Draft Orders
CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—(P)—Cleveland's Indians may have finished second in the American League, but they are way out in front in contributions to the military.

When Rookie Catcher Hal Naragon reported for induction in Canton Tuesday, it brought to eight the number of Cleveland players now in the armed forces. The Tribe had been counting heavily on Naragon helping out with the catching chores next season. His departure leaves only aging Birdie Tebbetts to aid Jim Hegan.

There now are 29 American Leaguers in military service. The Indians' eight equals the combined figure of the three other first division clubs—New York, Boston and Chicago.

Red Birds Book 15 Spring Games
COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—(P)—The Columbus Red Birds baseball club of the American Association will play 15 games with Rochester, Louisville, Indianapolis and Toronto in spring training next year.

The Birds, for the sixth consecutive year, will train at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Raiders Fight To 50-46 Win Over Good Hope
Atlanta cagers posted a hard-fought 50-46 victory over Good Hope Tuesday night in a raid of the Good Hope hardwood.

Both teams registered 10 points each in the opening chukker of the encounter, although the Good Hoppers marched to a 24-21 halftime edge.

Atlanta sprang back following the midmark rest to hold a meagre 30-29 lead going into the last stanza, and picked up three more points over the host club in the finale for the 50-46 count.

Harold Gerhardt claimed game honors for his Red Raider quintet in the scrap with a total of 20 points, while Baird paced the Good Hope club with 12 markers.

Atlanta's next encounter will be a county league test Friday night against invading Darby Trojans. Box score of Tuesday's victory follows:

Stanky Is Given 2-Year Contract As Card Manager
ST. LOUIS, Dec. 12.—(P)—Edward Raymond Stanky steps gingerly into his new role as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals confronted by a novel problem. Can he win a starting position on his own team?

It's definite, says the former New York Giants second baseman, he will serve as a playing manager. However, the "ifs, buts and maybes" begin to pile up when he's asked where he will insert himself in the Redbird lineup.

He signed a two-year contract with owner Fred Saigh Tuesday.

DiMaggio May Get TV Sports Post

Great Yankee Clipper Of Wear No Uniform

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Joe DiMaggio, definitely through as a player at the age of 37, is expected to remain in the New York Yankee organization in the role of a television broadcaster.

The great outfielder, who Tuesday announced he would never wear a baseball uniform again—as a player, manager or coach—is considering an offer as TV commentator of Yankee home baseball games.

While both parties refused to commit themselves, Yankee President Dan Topping admitted DiMaggio had been offered the TV job “among other propositions.” DiMaggio said all his offers dealt with radio and television and “it is possible” he will accept the Yankee bid. The TV post reportedly would pay him $50,000 a season for three years.

DiMaggio plans to leave Friday for his home in San Francisco to think over all the propositions. He said he expected to reach a decision “some time next week.”

THE YANKEE Clipper appeared in good spirits as he outlined his reasons for quitting before grinding cameras, glaring lights and the largest sports press gathering since the days of Babe Ruth.

“Old injuries that lingered on and some new ones hastened my decision to retire,” DiMaggio explained.

Another reason was night baseball. Joe estimated the arc light play cut about two years off his career.

“It gets tough to recuperate the next day from a night under the bulbs when you get older,” he said. “Night ball should be played every night or not at all.”

“You don’t get to bed until two in the morning, or so, and wake up at 10. I found that wasn’t enough rest to get the aches and pains out of my system. I’d go to the park or an afternoon game the next day, and sometimes I wouldn’t wake up until the fifth or sixth inning.”

“I found playing last year a torture. I was full of aches and pains. I found it difficult to get out of bed each morning—especially after a night game. I know I’ll miss the game, but I don’t feel too badly about it because those days and nights of agony are still fresh in my mind.”

DIMAGGIO SAID he first knew he was slipping as far back as three years ago when he realized his timing was beginning to be off and his reflexes were beginning to slow up. He began thinking of retiring last spring and made up his mind to quit at the close of the campaign.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Stanley Damerell, 72, who wrote the words for “Let’s All Sing Like the Birds Sing” and other songs, died Wednesday.

Manager Casey Stengel, expressing regret over DiMaggio’s decision, lauded Joe as “the greatest player I have ever had the honor of managing.” The skipper said he planned to give Joe’s centerfield post to 21-year-old Mickey Mantle.

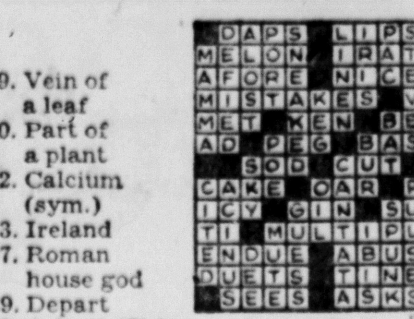

Thus DiMaggio closes out a memorable baseball career. Holder of numerous batting and fielding records, this great all-around performer undoubtedly will rank beside such superb stars as Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and other baseball immortals.

He put in 13 active seasons in the majors, all with the Yankees, built up a lifetime .325 batting mark despite numerous injuries.

His 56-consecutive game batting record may never be equalled. He played with 10 pennant winners and was a member of nine world championship clubs, both records.

Workers Repair Broken Water Main On McCrea

Discovery of a leak in a city water main on McCrea avenue, south of Watt street Tuesday sent city water department workers to digging.

Repairs were in progress Wednesday morning, as water department workers sought the cause of the trouble.

Ervin Leist, superintendent of the city water and sewage department, said Wednesday that the digging might necessitate a lowering of water pressure in the area, or a total shut-off of water to area residents.

Workers believed however that hydrant flushing in the area might reduce pressure sufficiently as to make discovery of the leak.

McCrea avenue is being blocked to traffic but regular traffic on Main and Watt streets is being maintained.

Report of the leak was made at about 1 p. m. Tuesday, when residents of the area reported McCrea avenue partially flooded.

What is called “Progressive Education” is not in any way associated with the Communist movement, but we must note that since its introduction into our educational system, patriotism has been weakened. As the child is taught by activities rather than by precept, the virtues of our civilization are not strengthened in the child because virtue is “preachy” teaching, which these educators avoid. Actually, the child is left without a ruler.

President Sproul said: “I believe that our American universities must take an affirmative attitude toward the basic American value of responsible freedom. They must be the chief protagonists of our civilization, aggressive in their defense of our traditions, and vigorous in their opposition to those who would destroy them.”

It may be fascinating fun for the rich to be so liberal that they pave the way for the communists, but it does not make sense. And most of the ladies in these women’s clubs are, in their own affairs, very sensible.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Joe DiMaggio, definitely through as a player at the age of 37, is expected to remain in the New York Yankee organization in the role of a television broadcaster.

The great outfielder, who Tuesday announced he would never wear a baseball uniform again—as a player, manager or coach—is considering an offer as TV commentator of Yankee home baseball games.

While both parties refused to commit themselves, Yankee President Dan Topping admitted DiMaggio had been offered the TV job "among other propositions." DiMaggio said all his offers dealt with radio and television and "it is possible" he will accept the Yankee bid. The TV post reportedly would pay him $50,000 a season for three years.

DiMaggio plans to leave Friday for his home in San Francisco to think over all the propositions. He said he expected to reach a decision "some time next week."

THE YANKEE Clipper appeared in good spirits as he outlined his reasons for quitting before grinding cameras, glaring lights and the largest sports press gathering since the days of Babe Ruth.

"Old injuries that lingered on and some new ones hastened my decision to retire," DiMaggio explained.

Another reason was night baseball. Joe estimated the arc light play cut about two years off his career.

"It gets tough to recuperate the next day from a night under the bulbs when you get older," he said. "Night ball should be played every night or not at all."

"You don't get to bed until two in the morning, or so, and wake up at 10. I found that wasn't enough rest to get the aches and pains out of my system. I'd go to the park or an afternoon game the next day, and sometimes I wouldn't wake up until the fifth or sixth inning."

"I found playing last year a torture. I was full of aches and pains. I found it difficult to get out of bed each morning—especially after a night game. I know I'll miss the game, but I don't feel too badly about it because those days and nights of agony are still fresh in my mind."

DIMAGGIO SAID he first knew he was slipping as far back as three years ago when he realized his timing was beginning to be off and his reflexes were beginning to

Manager Casey Stengel, expressing regret over DiMaggio's decision, lauded Joe as "the greatest player I have ever had the honor of managing." The skipper said he planned to give Joe's centerfield post to 21-year-old Mickey Mantle.

Thus DiMaggio closes out a memorable baseball career. Holder of numerous batting and fielding records, this great all-around performer undoubtedly will rank beside such superb stars as Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and other baseball immortals.

He put in 13 active seasons in the majors, all with the Yankees, built up a lifetime .325 batting mark despite numerous injuries.

His 56-consecutive game batting record may never be equalled. He played with 10 pennant winners and was a member of nine world championship clubs, both records.

Workers Repair Broken Water Main On McCrea

Discovery of a leak in a city water main on McCrea avenue, south of Watt street Tuesday sent city water department workers to digging.

Repairs were in progress Wednesday morning, as water department workers sought the cause of the trouble.

Ervin Leist, superintendent of the city water and sewage department, said Wednesday that the digging might necessitate a lowering of water pressure in the area, or a total shut-off of water to area residents.

Workers believed however that hydrant flushing in the area might reduce pressure sufficiently as to make discovery of the leak.

McCrea avenue is being blocked to traffic but regular traffic on Main and Watt streets is being maintained.

Report of the leak was made at about 1 p. m. Tuesday, when residents of the area reported McCrea avenue partially flooded.

LOCAL WORKERS PREPARED

Highway Department Crews Ready For Old Man Winter

Old Man Winter with his blanket of ice and snow hasn't yet reached Pickaway County highways, but the Ohio Department of Highways' maintenance bureau is ready for him.

Bureau engineers have proven themselves very effective in past years in the science of snow removal and ice control on Ohio's 18,400 miles of state highways, and now they're set for another Winter.

In Pickaway County, as well as other counties throughout the state the maintenance bureau has already made preparations.

Joseph A. Rooney, in charge of the Department of Highways garage in Circleville, said Wednesday that local crews have been prepared for several weeks.

ICE CONTROL barrels containing cinders have been placed along Pickaway County state highways, and the Circleville highway garage has on hand six to seven tons of salt and other chemicals to be used by snow removal crews.

A local crew of about 30 will work out of Circleville, while two other men, attached to the Pickaway County area, work out of Mt. Sterling.

State engineers believe they have done everything possible to make Ohio's snow removing operation one of the most effective in the country.

In early October, plans are made for testing every one of the 1,064 pieces of equipment used by the Department for keeping Ohio's highways safe for travel during times of ice and snow.

After every piece of equipment has been tested for such things as faulty brakes, bad windshield wipers, and the many parts that could go wrong with the mechanical devices during an emergency, the operators are then taken on what the Department calls a "dry run" to familiarize the men with the equipment they will operate and the roads they will travel when winter snow and freezing rain starts to fall.

MANY MONTHS before, the administrative heads of the maintenance bureau have secured needed materials and stock piled them at the many outposts throughout the state. The material includes thousands of tons of chemicals, cinders, and various types of abrasives that will be used during the winter by snow removal crews.

C. W. McCaughey, maintenance chief, feels that the Department's communications are one of the most important parts of snow removal operations. To be most effective against freezing rain or snow, you have to outline your plan of attack before Old Man Winter starts and gets ahead of you. Once the bad weather gets ahead of the men and machines, it becomes more difficult to keep the snow under control.

When reports first start coming in from the United States Weather Bureau which calls the Maintenance Bureau immediately if any bad weather is in sight, an alert is sounded to some 250 outposts throughout the state. The men and equipment stand by with loaded trucks ready to start fighting the snow at a moment's notice.

When men and equipment go into action, reports are filed every few hours to the Columbus office on the progress of the crews working all over the state. The maintenance engineers utilize a huge map to plot the progress of the crews working and the number of inches of snow that has fallen in the different divisions of the state.

By this method, an over-all picture of the state's roads is available and reported by telegram to auto clubs, radio stations and newspapers.
